

ENGLISH LANGUAGE A-LEVEL

For more information please see Mrs Berry

For whom is this course suitable?

Students studying English Language will need to have gained a grade 5 in both English Language and English Literature.

The English Language course is designed to suit students who are scientific, creative and imaginative. Over the two years of the course, the areas of study and investigation are based on analysis, creativity and research into the wider social and political issues raised by language use. There is a considerable amount of freedom to study in fields and write in genres, which suit one's own academic development and progress to an extent not experienced in GCSE language work.

English Language may be successfully combined with any number of other subjects: complementary areas include History, Sociology or Modern Languages, but this subject can prove a valuable addition to any combination of other subjects as it helps to develop candidates' skills in the essential areas of reading for meaning and analytical thinking.

What will I learn on this course?

Paper 1: Language, the Individual and Society

Section A: Textual Variations and Representations - Students should study a range of texts: about various subjects, from various writers and speakers, for various audiences, for various purposes, in a variety of genres, using a variety of modes (written, spoken, electronic), from different times, from different places (global, national, regional).

Section B: Children's Language Development - Students should explore how children develop their spoken and written skills.

Paper 2: Language Diversity and Change

Section A: Language Diversity and Change - The aim of this area of study is to allow students to explore language diversity and change over time.

Section B: Language Discourses - Students should study a range of examples of language in use and research data to inform their study of diversity and change.

Non-examination Assessment: Language in Action

Language Investigation - Students may choose to pursue an area of individual interest. For example, this might include studies of: representations of different individuals, social groups or nationalities, regional dialect etc.

Original Writing - Students will produce one piece of original writing based on one of the following three areas: The Power of Persuasion, The Power of Storytelling and The Power of Information.

What could I do at the end of my course?

A qualification in English Language is an excellent grounding for any number of careers, particularly those that require the ability to communicate clearly, in speech or writing, and those that require the ability to analyse. Those interested in journalism, media, law or the civil service would benefit from studying English Language.
